David Sinclair: Alliant National Title Insurance Company CIO

Expertise in complex business, technology problems and strategies

LONGMONT—Alliant National Title Insurance Company, a unique title insurance underwriter that partners with Independent Agents to improve their competitive position in the marketplace, is pleased to announce that David Sinclair has joined the company as Alliant National's CIO, effective May 1, 2011. David brings over 20 years experience in information technology leadership, including significant expertise in managing and solving complex business problems critical to an organization's ultimate success.

Prior to David's formally joining Alliant National this month, he worked in a consulting capacity helping Alliant National build and stabilize its technology and business infrastructure, particularly as the company enjoyed an accelerated growth curve, expanding across several regions in the United States. He is also a lecturer at the University of Colorado's School of Business, where he teaches Socially Responsible Enterprise, a core class in the MBA curriculum within the university's Center for Education and Social Responsibility.

“We feel very fortunate to have David Sinclair on our team, both as a technology expert and business management specialist,” says Dave Ginger, Alliant National President. “We have enjoyed and reaped the benefits of his vast experience and knowledge and now will continue to work with him as our vision for Alliant National continues.”

Alliant National’s mission is to protect property owners’ investment by providing secure title insurance delivered by the finest Independent Agents available. Alliant National provides a partnership environment with its agents that improve the accuracy, efficiency and timeliness of its products, while improving the knowledge base of its agents, and offering the best title products and services possible.

“This is a rare opportunity to leverage my background in a dynamic and thriving environment,” says David. “I’ve thoroughly enjoyed participating in Alliant National’s growth over the last year, and very much look forward to the exciting plans the company is now rolling out.”
